Big Six Committees Tread Water in Year When Federal Elections Dominate

With no state elections this year, the so-called “Big Six” fund-raising committees reached the year’s mid-point with slightly below average fund-raising and spending, according to quarterly reports filed with the New Jersey Election Law Enforcement Commission (ELEC).

The two state parties and four legislative leadership committees have raised nearly $2.2 million and spent $1.7 million so far in 2022. That’s 3.9 percent and 4.4 percent, respectively, below averages for seven years without state elections dating back to 2010. On the plus side, the combined cash-on-hand of $1.45 million is 11 percent above the $1.3 million average for the same period.

“Combined cash-on-hand is above average even though the two state parties have transferred more than $500,000 to their federal accounts in recent months, presumably for this year’s federal congressional elections,” said Jeff Brindle, ELEC’s Executive Director.

The Democratic State Committee has moved $402,258 into its federal account this year while the Republican State Committee has shifted $125,000 into its federal account.

Compared to similar totals in 2018, Democratic fund-raising and spending totals are down while Republicans have raised more this year but spent less than four years ago. Both parties report larger cash-on-hand totals versus 2018.

Brindle said both parties would benefit from enactment of the pending “Elections Transparency Act” (S-2866/A4372). After being voted out unanimously and with bipartisan support by two state Senate Committees and an Assembly committee, the bill stalled before the Legislature recessed June 29.

Following ELEC recommendations, the bill would increase contribution limits on party committees including the Big Six and require disclosure by special interest groups that spend independently of candidates and parties. “Unlike parties and candidates, these independent groups face no contribution limits and have far eclipsed spending by party committees during the past decade,” Brindle said.

“Our existing outdated statute enables them to hide their contributions though New Jersey has been lucky that many have voluntarily disclosed their donors,” said Brindle. “We cannot continue to rely on this good will. Political strategies change and much of this money could suddenly turn dark. That is exactly what is happening in federal campaigns.”

“I remain hopeful that the Legislature will enact the reform bill this fall,” he said.
